- We are no where on the internet. I have asked 5 people who are on btc sites all day to look, and we're no where. if you want to see a company doing this correctly, look at bitcoinira.com. they are everywhere. We are asking people to invest with us, but they can't find us. we are coming off like a scam. and blowing the last chance we are going to have with this project. you need to spend more money and get the ads out there, or prepare for a refund request by everyone who has bought the coins so far, or worse. Plus, i checked the site this morning and we have only sold less than 1/2 of 1% of the amount we were going to try to raise, and this is over 6 weeks since our ICO started.

- I'm sorry to have so many harsh messages first thing in the morning, but I have now reviewed all the banner ads (at least all that were in the 3 zip files I found based on the email you sent me). These are all TERRIBLE. I now know why no one is buying the AML BitCoin token. Have you seen the banner ads that other coins are putting out there? They're all about the future of cryptocurrency, how to make money on btc, etc. they are intriguing. you want to click their site (I did!). The AML Bitcoin ads are beyond horrible. the only future they mention is "the future is much brighter today." What does that even mean? most are about transparency and compliance. Why would a coin buyer care at all about that? nothing about how we can't be hacked. nothing about AML Bitcoin taking over the coin world, being the coin of the future. nothing to make anyone click and buy. Marcus, the level of incompetence in this project is stunning to me. I think you and I need to find a time to meet face to face.
